Mexico's economy, long dependent on its northern neighbor, had weathered the global crisis relatively well until the peso's fall. The Baja California peninsula is home to an estimated American expatriates with some 30, of them living in Tijuana, Rosarito Beach and Ensenada.

Although he could not provide any official statistics for the number of Canadian They rented cheap rooms in the hooker hotels, as did the smugglers they paid to herd them through a border of barbed wire or porous chain-link fence. It appears to me that the immigrants are treated better than US citizens. This is amazingly ridiculous.
